

The investment strategies differ in terms of the expected risks and returns depending on the asset allocation. There are many types of digital assets available to investors in the crypto market, but choosing the right one for your portfolio can be difficult. Learn more about which portfolio allocation is right for you below. The following investment strategies are available:

Investment description of the portfolios

The core investment strategy is based on a semi-automated and a fully automated trading approach that works around the clock according to predefined parameters that are free of human emotions and can still be monitored by the portfolio manager. When an indication is created, the trade is either executed semi-automatically to keep full control of the portfolio, or the trade is executed automatically. The DAM S concept aims to achieve absolutely positive returns with buy and sell positions. The system continuously analyzes the technical and fundamental market conditions and searches for relevant entry and exit points. Key elements of the investment approach are in-depth knowledge of crypto fundamental analysis and the consistent adaptation of the technical market analysis as well as the implementation of the investment process. The aim is to provide a crypto portfolio with a low to negative correlation to traditional markets.

Overview of the asset allocation depending on the strategy

Your benefits at a glance

- semi and fully automated trading executions
- Algorithmic approach with buy and sell indicators
- capture of small trend movements
- low correlation to traditional markets
- broader diversification using Altcoins
- Favorable risk-return profile with the additional advantage of a clearly defined downside risk management
- a potentially suitable addition to every portfolio

Investor profile

All four investment strategies are aimed at investors who are looking for new sources of return and who are also prepared to accept increased price volatility. Due to the uncorrelated performance with the stock markets and the extraordinary increase in value in a very volatile market environment, this product can be seen as a lucrative investment alternative. The proposed investment period: From 48 months.
